ABOUT THIS TOOLKIT

The 10th UNCAC CoSP, taking place in Atlanta, Georgia (United States) on 11–15 December 2023 offers an opportunity to create momentum and advance the right of victims to participation and reparation in corruption cases worldwide.

This toolkit presents the key messages that need to be treated as a priority area within the UNCAC, as well as our key asks at the CoSP.

We encourage you to use this toolkit and messages as a starting point for your own advocacy and personalized messaging to drive impactful change. You can tailor and adapt the messages to suit your context.

MAIN GOALS THROUGH ADVOCACY AHEAD OF THE COSP

Our aim at the CoSP10 is to ensure that the issue of victims' right to participation and reparation in corruption cases takes center stage in the discussions.

The specific objectives can be summarized as:

1

At least 5 countries and 5 NGOs should make declarations or public statements towards advancing the issue of victims' reparation such as calling for UNODC to prepare a longer study and/or asking for a follow-up to the 2016 Working Group on Asset Recovery.

2

The inclusion of victims' language in two resolutions. Suggestions are available in the Priorities for State Parties section of this toolkit.

3

In side events and side discussions, encourage the organization of a dedicated session within the Asset Recovery Working Group to address the issue of Victims' Remedies and/or in the Implementation Review Group.

TACTICS

Demonstrate civil society unity around key asks

Share our open letter to UNCAC States Parties, written inputs, and joint statements during key moments to emphasize civil society's anti-corruption expectations for the 10th CoSP. This will signal to States Parties that their efforts may be evaluated negatively unless the expectations are at least partially met.

Earn visibility

Through effective messaging and good 'hooks' and 'angles', we will aim to get more coverage in the lead-up to the CoSP to help influence States Parties. See the messages shared in the social media messaging section.

Target key countries

While the submissions and statements address all States Parties, we can be strategic in which countries we target through direct advocacy.

- Spanish version
- French version

ACTIVITIES

Use social media:

- Tweet daily about the issue starting now using #CoSP10.
- On 9 December, International Anti-Corruption Day, tweet about this issue using the messages below.
- On 10 December, the 75th Anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, raise awareness on this issue using the messages below and social media content from our Resources for Civil Society shared google drive.

Contact the media:

Raise awareness on this issue, drafting and sharing an op-ed showcasing the cases happening in your country and linking to our open letter to State Parties.

ACTIVITIES

Draft and share your own victims' submission to the CoSP10:

- The submissions must uphold UN standards and avoid abusive language. In practice, we have come to understand that what UNODC means by this is that country names should not be used in a critical context, but highlighting good practice examples is ok. However, there is no official guidance on this aspect available.
- NGOs with ECOSOC status can submit written reports of up to 2000 words
- NGOs without ECOSOC status that were accredited to the CoSP can submit written reports of up to 1500 words.
- If you want copies of your submission to be made available to delegates, make sure to bring a sufficient number of hard copies on the first day of the Conference.
- Written submissions have to be sent to UNODC at uncac@un.org, two weeks before the Conference, so by Monday, 27 November 2023.

ACTIVITIES

Prepare for the CoSP:

- Prepare a 3-minute statement to deliver in a plenary session
- Prepare interventions for the Q&A sections of side events
- Reach out to the delegation of your country

PRIORITIES FOR STATES PARTIES

Corruption causes direct harm to individuals, institutions, communities, and societies as a whole. Such harm constitutes, for the most part, human rights violations. The UNCAC is explicit and unambiguous about the need to address the consequences of corruption and the rights of its victims.¹ The Political Declaration² adopted at the 2021 UN General Assembly Special Session (UNGASS) against Corruption expressly acknowledges victims of corruption, reiterating commitments to protect these individuals from threats and to compensate victims appropriately and justly.³ Yet, few victims have successfully obtained redress, and most of them have remained unidentified, unrepresented, or absent from corruption cases.⁴

We ask that the States Parties at the 10th UNCAC CoSP and all national and international actors enact measures and adopt practices to enforce the existing international legal framework and overcome practical obstacles to the rights of victims in corruption cases, as follows:

1. Article 34 on consequences of acts of corruption, calling on States to provide for remedial actions; Article 35 on the right to initiate legal proceedings and compensation# for damage; Article 32(5) on participation in proceedings; and Article 57(3)(c) on asset recovery.
2. UN General Assembly: Political Declaration adopted at the Special Session against Corruption, A/S- 32/2/Add.1, June 2021, <https://undocs.org/A/S-32/2/ADD.1>.
3. UN General Assembly: Political Declaration adopted at the Special Session against Corruption, A/S- 32/2/Add.1, June 2021, <https://undocs.org/A/S-32/2/ADD.1>.
4. UNCAC Coalition Working Group on Victims of Corruption. International Database on Corruption Damage Reparation and Legal Standing for Victims of Corruption

PREVENTION AND RECOGNITION OF CORRUPTION AS A HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATION

1

States should enforce the obligation of addressing the consequences of corruption and providing remedies to its victims, including assurances and/or guarantees of non-repetition in accordance with Article 4 of the draft convention on justice and support for victims of crime.⁵

2

States should recognize in their legal frameworks and procedures the special gravity of grand corruption and that grand corruption results in widespread human rights violations and abuses, ranging from denial of collective rights of vital public services (health, education, infrastructure, etc) and of individual political and civil rights. The frameworks and procedures should allow for these harms to be remedied.

5. <https://www.worldsocietyofvictimology.org/publications/Draft%20Convention.pdf>

INFORMATION, CAPACITY AND COOPERATION

3

State Parties are encouraged to monitor, report on and communicate instances of reparation.

4

States should make it mandatory for law enforcement authorities to identify, at an early stage, potential victims in corruption and other related offense cases at home and abroad, especially those affected by collective harm. Appropriate means of representation and reparation should be ensured in both cases. Countries are encouraged to develop operational guidelines and criteria for victims' identification based on international norms.

5

Victim engagement is important throughout the process. States Parties should notify victims about proceedings and investigations on corruption at home and abroad in a reasonable yet timely and accessible manner to enable victims to play a role, whether this involves being legally represented and seeking reparation, contributing information or being able to conduct advocacy and awareness raising campaigns. Victims' notifications could be published via online platforms, considering the literacy, gender gap and digital gender divide.

6

Countries should provide training and capacity-building programs for law enforcement and oversight agencies, judiciary, and other relevant stakeholders on the rights and related exigencies of victims of corruption, as well as on effective methods for providing redress and support, using a rights-based, gender-sensitive and trauma-informed approach.

STANDING, VOICE AND REPRESENTATION

7

Countries should, where they do not already exist, create mechanisms in accordance with their national laws for victims to participate in criminal, civil, constitutional and administrative proceedings to represent their interests, allowing individuals, collectivities and associations representing the public interest or diffuse interests to make claims for individual, collective and social reparation. Such legal standing should, where appropriate, provide victims with the right of appeal against decisions of the prosecutorial authority not to prosecute, particularly when that is a condition for reparation.

8

A more balanced representation of perpetrators and victims in settlements is needed. Rules and criteria for settlements and out-of-court agreements should ensure victims' direct representation and ensure reparation of harm.

9

States should enact laws to limit litigation costs for victims and should provide support services, including but not limited to financial and legal aid, psycho-social support, and information on victims' rights and available avenues for redress. Civil, administrative or other proceedings should not impose a financial burden upon victims that would prevent or discourage them from seeking redress.⁶

6. United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, General Comment No. 3 of the Committee against Torture (2012), para 29, https://www2.ohchr.org/english/bodies/cat/docs/gc/cat-c-gc-3_en.pdf, p 26.

The participation of victims in decisions about the actual use, destination and oversight of reparation funds, whether governmental or private, for specific purposes, should be enabled through appropriate mechanisms that allow for individual and collective representation in order to ensure that their interests are considered.

11

Given the range of obstacles to claims of victims, including for collective and social harm, also in grand corruption cases, states should appoint a victims' coordinator to identify, notify, represent and coordinate victims of corruption.

12

Instruments for victim representation should recognize that citizens are not all affected the same way due to societal gender roles. Therefore, explicit direct representation of women, minorities and other discriminated or excluded groups is required.

FORMS OF REPARATION

13

The obligation of States to protect human rights and offer redress is not suspended in cases of corruption and is not subordinated to establishing the legal responsibility of perpetrators. State reparation of such damages should be promoted, for example, through funds provided for that purpose, which should cover material and immaterial harms through monetary or other types of reparation (e.g. psycho-social and medical remedies for victims of sexual corruption or restitution).

14

Reparation awards should be mandatory, not discretionary, and consistent with the gravity and type of offense. Reparation of collective harm in cases of corruption can not be conditioned to establishing direct causality, nor individual liability.

15

States Parties should implement interim or preliminary measures to address imminent harms and provide relief to victims while the case is being investigated or prosecuted. Imposing interim or preliminary measures can prevent further harm and protect the interests of victims during the legal process. These measures can include seizing assets, imposing travel restrictions, or issuing injunctions to prevent the dissipation of proceeds of corruption or obstruction of justice.

16

States should recognize that the collective rights harmed by grand corruption include right to self-determination, right to the disposition of natural wealth and resources, right to the progressive realization of economic, social and cultural rights and to a clean, healthy and sustainable environment. These harms can be captured through concepts like social damages and moral damages.

17

Reparation can be material, immaterial or symbolic. Rehabilitation (i.e., legal, medical, psychological, financial, practical/material, and other assistance) should be provided, without discrimination of any kind and support best suited to victims who are particularly vulnerable because of a characteristic, such as gender, age, or ethnicity.

Thread post:

👊 If fighting #corruption does not translate into the well-being of citizens, it is doomed to fail.

We are calling on #UNCAC States Parties at #CoSP10 to enact measures & adopt practices in the interests of the rights of #VictimsofCorruption, while enforcing existing laws.

Our Working Groups on Victims of Corruption, Asset Recovery, Grand Corruption & State Capture and Gender, Inclusion & Corruption have clustered priorities for States Parties into 4 key areas, with recommendations to overcome practical obstacles to the rights of victims..

The 4 priority areas are:

1. Prevention and recognition of corruption as a human rights violation
2. Information, capacity and cooperation
3. Standing, voice and representation
4. Forms of reparation

Message du fil :

👊 Si la lutte contre la #corruption ne se traduit pas par le bien-être des citoyens, elle est vouée à l'échec.

Nous appelons les États parties de la #UNCAC à la #CoSP10 à promulguer des mesures & adopter des pratiques dans l'intérêt des droits des #VictimsofCorruption, tout en appliquant les lois existantes.

Nos groupes de travail sur les victimes de la corruption, le recouvrement des avoirs, la grande corruption et la capture d'État et le genre, l'inclusion et la corruption ont regroupé les priorités pour les États parties dans 4 domaines clés, avec des recommandations pour surmonter les obstacles pratiques aux droits des victimes...

Les quatre domaines prioritaires sont les suivants

1. Prévention et reconnaissance de la corruption en tant que violation des droits de l'homme
2. Information, capacité et coopération
3. Position, voix et représentation
4. Formes de réparation
